"I don't think I'll ever forget the expression of Captain Roper's face," Nelson recalls. "He was just beaming."

It was, indeed, a moment of triumph for Rozier, and he handled it like a true dogeyman. Up the signal arm of the Cecil went international flags that spelled out the query:

The Russian commander coldly declined to reply.

Although around 30 contacts were made during the Cuban crisis, with some subs being forced to the surface for lack of air and battery charges, the Cecil was the only ship to accomplish its mission.

"That was the funniest thing I saw this ship has ever had," said the same man, 3rd Class Male, C. White, 23, of Memphis, Tenn. "The whole rail was covered by guys in their slippers and shower shoes."

The game continued throughout the night and the next day and the next night. The temperature still was falling with the wind blowing from the west. A submarine sailed in the night hours a prowling FIV plane, gentle snail. From the top of the mountain and confirm that its end gear had jammed the hammer and the magazine. Defenseless Gorsk was under the Russian flag, the
